Keep in touch with the Market by watching these sales, which is the only intelligent manner in which to deal in stocks. There is plenty of room in our office. Drop in and watch the quotations.

Notify us if you wish to be placed on our regular phone list, when the quotations of any session of the Board will cheerfully furnished every day. All you have to do is to ring us up.

Just remember that all our offices and the San Francisco Stock Exchange are connected by private wire.

THE WHITE MOUNTAINS

The White Mountain range is a narrow uplift rising out of the bed of the Great Basin, in which surprising discoveries of gold and copper have recently been made. Tonopah, Goldfield, Bullfrog, Manhattan and Greenwater are but the beginning—the unbolting of the door to innumerable treasures in the American Desert.

The White Mountains, about 100 miles in length, extend along the western side of the Basin, paralleling on the east, the Sierra Nevada. From Mount Whitney's peak, apexing the Sierra Nevada, and the highest point in the United States, you can look eastward across the White Mountains and distinctly see the rim of Death Valley, the lowest area of dry land in the United States. The parched bed of this valley is about 400 feet below sea level. Mount Whitney and Death Valley are both in Inyo County, California.

The White Mountain range runs from Esmeralda County, Nevada, southerly into Inyo County, California, where it terminates. In this southern end lies the Cerro Gordo mines with a record bullion product of over $17,000,000.

This range is one of the several uplifts which form the general system of mountains traversing the wonderful desert basin. It is intersected throughout its entire length of 100 miles by road, approximately parallel, mineralized zones, some carrying chiefly gold, others copper and others argentiferous galena, and the whole presents a most inviting field for the geologists, mineralogists and miners.

Mexicans were here in the '50s and '60s. Remains of their crude smelters and primitive arastras are found at various points in the gulches and canyons; but they were surface miners only, and the Indians were hostile, water scarce, food supplies hundreds of miles distant. That they erected works and did their shallow mining under such difficulties are proofs that values lie in the White Mountains awaiting methods of modern miners, under favorable conditions. Streams in the near-by Sierras can supply power. A railroad now runs along the western base of the range and a fertile valley lies at its feet.

Prospective mines are numerous throughout this main uplift and its spurs and in the adjacent, lesser ranges. To describe them would require volumes.

Recent developments have opened up two splendid gold mines at the Southern Belle group, and very late workings, now in progress, promise equally good results at the Black Canyon group. Both these properties lie at little distance apart in the western slope of the White Mountains in what is locally known as the "Gold Zone."—Frank Drake.

Scotty to Act as Host.

Walter Scott of Death Valley fame is in the lime light once more. He is making preparations to take a party of New Yorkers, including several ladies, into his Death Valley home and has promised to disclose for the first time the mystery of his fabulous wealth. He likewise desires to prove to the world that he is the possessor of most valuable property.

For the proposed trip several very handsome camp wagons have been secured and a number of very expensive mules purchased.

Elaborate preparations have been concluded to forestall another attempt at holdup at Wingate Pass, the scene of the recent ambush, in which several prominent New York mining men figured.

It is expected that upon emerging from the interior "Scotty" will charter another special, or buy a railroad outright.

Salvation Army

Next Wednesday evening the Salvation Army will have an "Opening" at their new hall.

A vacant store opposite the New Merchants' hotel is being fitted up with platform seats, electric sign, etc., to make it attractive and as comfortable as possible for the public who are invited to attend.

The officer in charge of Goldfield Salvation Army, Adjutant, Miss Pauli and Mrs. W. Wood, will have charge of the opening meeting, and a novel and interesting time is expected.

Henry J. Bartlett, one of the enterprising editors of the Round Mountain Nugget, came in from the new rich gold camp to the north, yesterday, and left this morning for Goldfield on a flying trip. He will return to Round Mountain tomorrow.
